LARGE NUMBER OF HUNTERS AFIELD

Hunters Get Daily Quota of Game in Record Time.

3,813 LICENSES ISSUED

Sets New High Record For County. Usual Number of Land Owners Prohibit Hunters From Trespassing.

With the sound of gun and rifle shots reverberating in the cool, frosty air of dawn and with the barking and baying of hundreds of dogs running down game, the hunting season of 1922 was ushered into Adams county for the enjoyment of more than 3,800 hunters and sportsmen this morning.

Those who obeyed the law did not take to the field until the first rays of the coppery sun appeared in the east, proclaiming a clear day. The sun rose at 6:36 o'clock. Many hunters were in the field and brush before that time, awaiting the appearance of Old Sol, in the meantime locating favorite rabbit or other small game haunts.

Hundreds of sportsmen in Gettysburg, following their annual custom in proclaiming November 1 a holiday, went in search of their favorite game, leaving most industries in town temporarily crippled.

Before daylight automobile loads of hunters left town for the western part of Franklin county to hunt wild turkey. There are a few wild turkeys, according to report, in the hills west of Cashtown, but they are not as plentiful as in Franklin county.

Rabbits, of course, were the game most sought after and within two or three hours of the season's opening, the first hunters returned to town with their daily quota of five cottontails. Forty rabbits are allowed each hunter for the season. Many housewives, here and elsewhere, prepared rabbits for the noon day meal. Stewed, fried or in potpie rabbits are considered a delicacy by many persons.

About the usual number of farms, closed to hunters each year, appear with the customary "No Trespass" signs upon them this season. Several of the farms closed to hunting are now used as State game preserves. Young game is placed on these reserves and allowed to propagate for several years, before the land is thrown open to hunters.

County Game Warden Leo Bushman this morning declared that each hunter should keep within the limit number of kills prescribed by law. He stated that it was illegal for one hunter to kill more than the legal limit, giving the additional game to companions. Warden Bushman urges that hunters kill hawks without limit.

With 3,813 hunting licenses issued up to this morning, a new high record has been set in Adams county. This figure exceeds that of last year by almost 400.

FIRE DESTROYS SCHOOL

Maurice Stallsmith Principal of High School Prey to Flames.

Word has been received here of a fire which last Saturday morning destroyed the high school building at Neoga, Illinois, where Maurice Stallsmith, East Middle street, is principal, entailing a loss estimated from $60,000 to $70,000. About one-third of the loss is covered by insurance, according to reports.

The fire was caused by defective wiring, it is said, and practically all equipment in the building was destroyed.

For the time being, classes of the high school are being held in churches and other buildings in the city.

FORMER PASTOR AT SPECIAL SERVICE

Rev. L. D. Ott Preaches at One Hundredth Anniversary of M. E. Church.

As a part of the program in the continuation of the special services which are being held by the Methodist Episcopal Church here in honor of the one hundredth anniversary of the dedication of their first church building in Gettysburg in 1822, the Rev. L. D. Ott, of Ashland, Pennsylvania, and a former pastor here, preached the special sermon in the church Tuesday night. His general theme was "The Cross."

An informal reception was held in the church following the services, when the Rev. Ott met all of his old friends in the church. He served his pastorate here from 1909 to 1914, and said that he often looked back upon his five years service here with the greatest pleasure.

Mr. Ott took for his text "We Preach Christ Crucified, and God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross of Jesus Christ."

The preacher then proceeded to give something of the history of the Cross, upon which Christ was crucified, and which was never used for an execution after His death. Three hundred years after the Crucifixion, the mother of Constantine, the first Christian Emperor, led an expedition to Jerusalem to seek the Cross upon which He died.

Several pieces of wood, believed to be the true Cross, were found, and a church was erected upon the site. For nearly three hundred years this church was the mecca of pilgrims from all the Christian world, the Cross being the point of interest.

When Jerusalem was captured by the Turks, they preserved the Holy relic until it was taken from them by an expedition of Crusaders. It was later, again seized by the Turks, and since that time no trace of the Cross can be found.

But the idea that is embodied in the Cross, symbolical with the death of Christ as a sacrifice for the world, played a part in the recent world war, according to Mr. Ott, in view of the fact that our soldiers were willing to sacrifice their own lives that the world be made safe for democracy.

The sight of one of the larger battle-fields in France, said the Rev. Ott, where the graves of 50,000 American soldiers are each marked by a little white cross glistening in the sun, is an enduring example of the highest type of altruism which was possessed by those soldiers who lie there.

The highest ideals as typified in a realization of the true spirit of the cross, will never be lost to the world, said the preacher. Governments may rise and fall, kingdoms may come and go, and civilization will rise and decline in many parts of the world, but the spirit of Self-Sacrifice as that, which is represented by the Cross, will remain forever.

FIRST LOVE IS FOURTH

The first sweetheart of her girlhood Tuesday became the fourth husband of Mrs. Emma Keiser, of York, when she was united in marriage to J. Archie Campbell. It was 35 years ago that Mrs. Keiser and Campbell had their love affair, but circumstances parted them. Recently Campbell, who has been living in Baltimore, came to York and met a boyhood friend from whom he inquired concerning his former sweetheart. He was informed that she was a widow and lost no time in renewing the acquaintance.

A unique circumstance about Mrs. Campbell's marriage ventures is that, although she never had a child of her own, she has been stepmother to 27. She now is 55 years old.

INSURANCE AGAINST RABBITS

Start apple tree pruning early and if you wish to avoid damage to the trees by mice and rabbits allow the tree prunings to lie on the ground. The rodents prefer to eat the young tender bark of the twigs and damage to the trees is often prevented say the specialists of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Howard C. Hartley, of the firm of Dougherty and Hartley, of Center Square, was elected vice-president of the Citizens' Trust Company at the weekly meeting of the Board of Directors of that institution, Tuesday, succeeding the late ex-State Senator Martin, who died October 22.

MUMMERS' MARCH WAS BIG SUCCESS

Three Bands Led Long Line of Masked And Costumed Marchers.

WAS AN EVE OF PARTIES

Feasting, Dancing And Pranks Were Order of Night. Spirit And Spirits Well Represented The Occasion.

Led by the York Springs Band, the Mummers' Parade on Hallowe'en night formed behind in a small way at first, and like a rolling snowball, gathered numbers as it went, until by the time the line had marched out Chambersburg street, and returned to the Center Square, it had assumed formidable proportions. Many rounds were then made through the town. It was estimated 500 were in the lines.

The band from York Springs assisted the Gettysburg organization, who brought up the rear of the line, in furnishing music, and on one leg of the march the College Band broke into the line and played along with one of the other bands without either lights or music.

Each player in the three bands was in mask and costume, and all was in keeping with the general spirit of jollity.

In the line of mummers were costumed oddities on foot, riding in old farm wagons, automobiles and floats, and there were some mounted on prancing steeds, both horses and mules.

Rough riders and trick riders, clowns and ladies, dudes and hoodlums, all were present.

But the feeling of jollity for the occasion was not confined alone to the grand parade. Some in mufti, in pairs, and three and singly, mingled with the crowds on the sidewalks, playing innocent and good-natured pranks. And much of the activity was carried on in the homes as well.

It was an eve of parties for young and old, of masquerade, of old-fashioned games, of feasting and dancing and pranks; the latter presumably being performed by spooky visitors from forgotten graves, this being their "big night out" for all the year.

But there had to be some limit to sport. The police, who sometimes fail to catch the full spirit of the occasion were instructed to spoil all attempts to hang fifty-gallon stills on church steeples and other ultra-modern aspects the celebration may assume.

Time was, and not so long ago, when other kinds of spirits made a night of it. Possibly some of these evaded the prohibition law, for spirits were ever above mundane rules and regulations.

WOLF ON STAND IN HIS OWN DEFENSE

Tells Story in "His Own Way" in Conspiracy to Obstruct Justice Charge.

(By Associated Press)

Baltimore, Nov. 1—As the star witness in his own defense, Harry B. Wolf, lawyer, today took the stand in his trial with Walter Socolow on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice in the Norris murder case and in a most dramatic fashion told his own version of his connection, direct and indirect, with every phase and feature of the story from a start to finish.

Given free rein on direct examination, Wolf told an apparently straightforward and convincing tale. Not once was he interrupted by counsel for the State and only once or twice by his own attorneys.

The story was illustrated with photographs of his beautiful suburban residence and grounds and the pictures were passed to the five judges on the bench to impress on their minds the points Wolf wished to make in his recital of the visit of Socolow and John Kellar on the evening of August 22—the same night on which Detective Harry Hammersla had called to ask Wolf's aid in capturing Socolow and at the very same hour.

For forty minutes Wolf told his own story "in his own way" as he asked permission and "in his own way" as Judge Gorter permitted.

No change will be made in the flats on the second floor until April 1 of next year when leases on that part of the building will expire.

APPLE WEEK BEING HELD IN THE STATE

Secretary Rasmussen Fears 8,000,000 Bushels May Go to Waste.

BUY AND STORE, HE SAYS

Pennsylvania Apples Have Flavor Not Excelled by Any Other State. Good Yield This Year.

Help prevent eight million bushels of Pennsylvania's apple crop from going to waste, is the plea of Secretary of Agriculture Fred Rasmussen, who has issued a statement in connection with the state-wide observance of Apple Week.

Apple Week began in Pennsylvania, Tuesday, and everywhere throughout the state an effort is being made to dispose of the State's entire crop of apples, estimated at more than 12,000,000 bushels.

"Pennsylvania's apple crop this year amounts to something more than twelve million bushels" said Secretary Rasmussen. "Of this crop approximately a third is known as the commercial crop—apples that will be picked and packed for storage.

"We have left eight million bushels of apples that are available at this time but with no storage facilities for them. Unless these apples are taken into the homes and stored for future use, a large part of this crop will be an economic loss.

"Pennsylvania does not have an overproduction of apples. The yield is good—it is also good in other states. If the people of Pennsylvania will purchase liberally of this healthful fruit during Apple Week—making their purchases in bulk and storing the apples for winter use, the Pennsylvania apple crop can be disposed of without loss.

"Last year apples were scarce and the price considerably higher than during the present year. Yet in 1921 there were 3,491,000 bushels of apples shipped into the fifteen principal cities of this state, all coming from other states.

"Pennsylvania's apples have a flavor and texture that cannot be excelled by fruit grown anywhere in the United States. I therefore appeal to the people of Pennsylvania to purchase liberally of the State's fruit crop during Apple Week that we may not sustain an economic loss which would be almost irreparable."

TWO DEAD; ONE WOUNDED

Youth Slays Former Sweetheart And Then Self.

(By Associated Press)

Messick, Mich., Nov. 1—Ray Judd, 17 years old, last night shot and killed his former sweetheart, Loretta Redman, 16 years old, and seriously wounded her chum, Nettie White, 16, with whom she was driving in a buggy on a lonely road near here, and then turned the gun on himself and met instant death.

Judd, according to the authorities, approached the girl at a concert here last night, and asked her if she intended to resume for former role as his sweetheart. The girl is said to have replied in the negative.

The youth then obtained a shotgun and lay in wait along the roadside.

READY TO COMPROMISE

SATURDAY IS FOR DISABLED HEROES

Governor Sproul Proclaims "Forget-Me-Not" Day in State. Funds Are Needed.

Governor William C. Sproul has made an appeal for aid of the disabled veterans of the World War and the observance of Saturday as "Forget-me-not" day in Pennsylvania. While no special plans have been made by local American Legion officers for collecting funds for this purpose, contributions will be received by them.

"This same week, only four years ago," says the statement, "we were watching, with every emotion alert, the mighty drives by land and sea to end the great war which had filled us with anxiety and distress for long and sorrowful years. When, a few days later, the armistice came and our fears and our forbodings were set at rest, how grateful we felt at the brave spirits who had carried our arms to victory and brought peace once more to a war-weary world.

"As our fighting men came home we acclaimed them as heroes, and feted them and honored them in our enthusiasm and joy, and pledged them our everlasting thankfulness for their service to the nation and to civilization. Nearly every community in the land has already erected memorials to its own who are numbered among the immortal dead, and great public monuments have been reared or are planned by the States and by the Republic for our devoted defenders.

"All of this is as it should be, but what of the others who have sacrificed health, or limbs, or senses, and who are among us impaired and hindered in their chance for livelihood, and success?

"The officers of the Disabled Veterans of the World War have designated next Saturday, November 4th, as 'Forget-me-not Day,' when our people will be asked to make some contributions for carrying on the work of the organization. Upon that day accredited persons will offer for sale in public places throughout the country, little forget-me-nots as indications of the feeling which should animate every loyal heart in thanksgiving for the blessings of peace and prosperity which we are now enjoying. The money raised in this way will go—every dollar of it—for the need of the unfortunate 'buddies' who need a helping hand in the way of direct relief, hospital treatment, vocational training, employment or any other assistance which may best serve them.

"Surely these are laudable purposes, and the plans for 'Forget-me-not Day' must appeal strongly to us all. It gives me great pleasure to commend the project and to express my hope that the response of the people of Pennsylvania, always mindful of their duty and generous in their impulses will be most substantial and helpful upon this occasion."

MORE EVIDENCE IN HALL MURDER

Pig-Woman Says Explanation Was Demanded For Letters by Slayer.

WAS A FEMININE VOICE

Then a Time of Heated Argument, And Then Without Warning, The Shooting, She Said.

(By Associated Press)

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 1—In her eye-witness account of the Hall-Mills murder on September 14, Mrs. Jane Gibson, farmer, told the authorities, it was learned today, that a few minutes before the fatal shooting, she heard one of the women under the crabapple tree exclaim indignantly:

"Then explain the letters."

This part of Mrs. Gibson's story came to light through a complication she had with a neighbor after her statement to investigators. There was a moment or two of heated argument after explanation was demanded, then without warning, the shooting.

Notes that were said to have passed between the Rev. Edward W. Hall and his choir leader, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, the murder victims, were found strewn about their bodies under the tree.

Movements of investigators today, veiled in secrecy, appeared to be the center, for the most part in keeping under surveillance three men answering descriptions given by Mrs. Gibson. It was reported that special Deputy Attorney General Mott intended at an opportune moment, to bring these three before Mrs. Gibson.

MYSTERY IN POISON CAKE

(By Associated Press)

Philadelphia, Nov. 1.—Detectives and postal inspectors, having reached no solution in the mystery of the death of W. W. Sterrett, expert accountant of Devon, and the serious illness of his wife, have set out to find the typewriter which was used to address the package in which the death dealing cake was sent to the Sterrett home.

They have no clews upon which to work, but the character of the type used in the address, leads them to believe that they know the make of machine used. It is said that they believe the person who used the machine to have been a novice, as the touch was very irregular. Instances of this are shown in many of the letters.

Mrs. Sterrett is now pronounced out of danger, according to physicians at the hospital, who say that she will be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

STOCK REPORT

Very Irregular During Morning Becoming Strong.

(By Associated Press)

New York, Nov. 1.—Cessation of forced liquidation of certain issues which immediately showed a tendency to move to higher ground and a resumption of short selling in others caused a highly irregular stock market during the morning. Both speculative and investment shares moved in a conflicting manner with the key points of weakness in the Mexican oils and some of the food, motor accessories, and independent steel shares. Impressive strength was shown by Standard Oil merchandise and textile shares and a few special railroad stocks were variable but mainly higher. Toward noon the trend of prices became more uniformly upward in response to a rally in United States Steel which advanced a point above its initial quotation. Call money opened at 5 per cent.

CRISIS BETWEEN U. S. AND BRITAIN

Government Closes Newcastle Consulate Until English Apologize to Officials.

CHARGES GROUNDLESS

Investigators Sent From Here Exonerate Slater And Brooks of Charges Laid Against Them Last August.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The United States Government has decided definitely not to reopen the American Consulate at Newcastle, England, until the British Government has unconditionally withdrawn the charges it made against Consul Slater and Vice-Consul Brooks, and publicly exonerated the two officials. The British Foreign Office has been made aware of this determination, it was learned Tuesday. The decision was reached after exhaustive investigations of the situation at Newcastle, which disclosed nothing whatever, in the opinion of American officials, to support charges which led the British authorities last August to cancel the exequaturs of Slater and Brooks.

Action of the British Government in cancelling the exequaturs was followed by the closing of the consulate, and three investigations by the Washington Government into charges that Slater and Brooks used their official positions in New Castle improperly, in discriminating against British shipping interests and to the advantage of American steamship lines. The first two were made respectively by the American Embassy in London and by Consul General Skinner. These reports agreed that no substantiation of the charges against Slater and Brooks could be obtained, although British officials had been asked to present all evidence in their possession.

Special Inquiry Made

Still not satisfied to act on the two reports, the American Government sent Nelson Johnson, an executive officer of the State Department, to England with instructions to make an independent inquiry of the most thorough character. His report is in complete harmony with those of Ambassador Harvey and Consul General Skinner, and acquits the two consular officers of any wrong-doing.

On the basis of the three reports the British Government has been definitely informed that the American consulate at Neweastle will remain closed until charges against Slater and Brooks have been detracted in such fashion as to afford the two officials that public redress to which this Government feels they are entitled. So far as is known, the British Foreign Office has not as yet indicated to the American Government what action it proposes to take in the circumstances.

OLDEN SPLENDOR FOR KAISER

Former Household Officials to Wear Imperial Guards Uniforms.

Doorn, Holland, Nov. 1.—At the chateau here of former Emperor William of Germany preparations are actively proceeding for the wedding next Sunday of the one-time war lord of Germany and Princess Hermine of Reuss. Wagonloads of plants and flowers daily are arriving for use in carrying out the scheme of floral decorations.

Numerous persons connected with the former imperial household at Potsdam are coming to Doorn. Among those who already have arrived is the famous Potsdam chef.

Former household officials who attend the ceremony will wear the customary gala uniform of black with silver lace embroidered with imperial eagles. They also will wear silver neck chains.

Secrecy with regard to the wedding continues to be rigorously observed, William each morning giving only the orders for that particular day to his household, so as to prevent any "leaks." Burgomaster Schimmel-Pennick alone possesses the secret of the precise hour at which the civil ceremony preceding the religious ceremony will be performed. The burgomaster will not wear his uniform. He will read the official documents in Dutch, but since William and Hermine do not understand that he will as a matter of courtesy, conduct the remainder of the civil ceremonies in German.

Wedding guests are arriving here daily.

ANNOUNCES CURE FOR SHELL SHOCK

Chicago Doctor Offers to Give 100 Soldiers Glandular Treatment.

Chicago, Nov. 1—Dr. William Held, lecturer before the Illinois Post-Graduate Medical School Clinic, announced Tuesday that he had offered to treat 100 soldiers suffering from shell shock by making harmonious the function of the ductless glands, from which a toxic condition has resulted. "What we have to do is to determine by blood tests the deficiency or excess of glandular activity and then restore the harmony by injection of suitable extracts," he said. "This dispels the mental cloud."

Dr. Held said his offer to treat 100 soldiers had been made to President Harding and the Veterans' Bureau, and that Director Forbes of the Bureau had expressed his thanks, but said that he did not want any experiments made upon the soldiers. Dr. Held said he had replied that he would not experiment but would employ methods resulting from 26 years of what he believed had been successful efforts to cure epilepsy and certain forms of insanity.

"Out of 400 cases of epilepsy, I can say that 18 per cent have been cured," Dr. Held said. "Even cases in asylums, and others on the way to asylums, have been cured. As a result I can say that insanity, whether due to epilepsy, shell shock or whatever cause, is no longer to be looked upon as well-night incurable."

Other Chicago physicians expressed interest in Dr. Held's method and said the theory was in line with medical developments, but that so far as their records went they had no knowledge of cures in such cases.

WOMEN ARE A BORE

Self Conscious And Ignorant, Says Colonel Harvey.

London, Nov. 1—Colonel George Harvey's recently announced "discovery" the Bible recognizes no women as having souls has led some one to delve into his writings of recent years to get a line on what the Colonel, now American Ambassador to Great Britain, thinks about women. What the Colonel has said isn't at all flattering.

His views are found in his book, "Women, Etc.," written sixteen years ago. His comments on the American girl of that time follow:

"We find little that is interesting, aside from her physical appearance, in the American girl of today between the ages of fifteen and twenty two. Indeed, if the blunt truth be spoken, she is rather a bore, self-conscious, ignorant and concerned chiefly with matrimonial aspirations.

"The mother of the present day is likely to be so apprehensive that her daughter may seem old-fashioned and lack some of the immediately modern competitive fascinations that she unwisely tolerates practices disagreeable to herself. Apparently, she has yet to learn that, to the intelligent American of marriageable age, pertness soon comes to be as distasteful as even priggishness."

HAS CIVIL WAR TAG

Father's Identification Mark Sent to Philadelphia Man.

Philadelphia, Nov. 1.—John J. S. Rodgers, an employe of the State Department of Labor, has recovered a brass identification tag, dug up on the site of the battle of Salem Church, Spottsylvania county, Virginia, which his father wore when he was killed in that battle in the Civil War.

Captain Peter W. Rodgers, of Company B, 119th Pennsylvania Volunteers, fell in a clump of trees as the company was falling back. The woods were fired soon after, and the body and clothing consumed.

The tag was not found by searchers after the battle. A short time ago a resident of the county, ploughing, unearthed the relic and turned it over to a Fredericksburg newspaper, which published an article about it. The article was read by relatives of Mr. Rodgers, who notified him, and he sent for and obtained the relic.

NOVEL SERVICE PLEASES

Motion Pictures of Bible Scenes Given in Fairfield

With motion pictures of "The Birth of Our Savior," and "Jesus, The Light of the World," as the main attractions, a large crowd packed the Fairfield St. John's Reformed Church, of which the Rev. Walter C. Pugh is pastor.

The sermon, which preceded the pictures, was preached by Mr. Pugh, his theme being "The Need of Living the Christ-Like Life." The combination of sermon and pictures, was well appreciated by the congregation, many of whom expressed the wish that the services be continued.

The next one of a similar nature will be held Sunday evening, December 12, at which time a religious picture in two reels, "Modern Ruth," will be shown.

MUSSOLINI LOST NO TIME IN WORK

New Italian Premier at Desk Early And Ready For Duties.

WARNED HIS MINISTERS

Says Members of His Cabinet Must be Prompt or Lose Jobs. Orders Demobilization of Fascisti.

Rome, Nov. 1.—Benito Mussolini, the Fascista head of Italy's new government, was in his office at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning to begin his active work as Premier. An hour later he and his colleagues in the Cabinet were received by King Victor Emmanuel and individually took the oath of office.

Upon reaching the Government office after his night's rest, Premier Mussolini called each of the members of his Cabinet by telephone in order to ascertain whether all these civil servants of the State were at their posts, the new Premier having knowledge that many ministers in former regimes had the habit of appearing an hour or two or even three hours late.

"Whoever neglects his duty shows himself unworthy of his post and must be replaced," Premier Mussolini announced in his direct, assertive way.

The Premier made an early report to King Victor Emmanuel of the entire situation throughout Italy and the latest reports from abroad, giving His Majesty an impartial view of how the solution of the crisis in Italy had been received both at home and in foreign countries.

Premier Reports To King.

King Victor Emmanuel received the Cabinet members in a cordial, earnest way. He shook hands with each minister, congratulating them all, but adding that a severe task was before them, and saying he trusted in their devotion to the welfare of the nation for the success of their mission. Premier Mussolini was the first to take the oath of office.

Accounts of Mussolini's appearance before King Victor Emmanuel Monday, when he went to consult over the formation of the Cabinet, are bringing out some picturesque details. Mussolini was wearing his Fascisti uniform and his first words to His Majesty were:

Apologizes To King.

"I must apologize for coming before Your Majesty in my black shirt."

Mussolini, who also wore a Sam Browne belt, puttees and a sash of the Fiume colors, added that he wished to present himself as representative of the national movement which had overthrown all obstacles in order to reconstruct the country, "for which purpose," he went on, "I am Your Majesty's obedient servant."

The King and Signor Mussolini then shook hands, both pledging themselves to work together for advancement of Italy.

HARTMAN—CROUSE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crouse, near Littlestown, announce the marriage of their daughter, Jane Elizabeth Crouse, to Ezra Hartman, son of the Rev. and Mrs. J. Stewart Hartman, Cavetown, Maryland. The ceremony took place at Cavetown, Monday evening, at 6 o'clock, and was performed by the brother of the bridegroom before a few immediate relatives. The bride was attired in a pearl gray Spanish lace dress over Canton crepe with slippers to match and wore a corsage of orchids and bride roses. Her going away suit was volney red trimmed with mole fur. The bride is a graduate of York Business school and for the past three years has been employed by the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company, Philadelphia. She is a granddaughter of Levi J. Motter, Littlestown. The bridegroom is an alumnus of F. & M. college, Lancaster, and is employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Philadelphia. After a week's wedding trip to St. Louis, and points in the West, they will be at home in Philadelphia.

QUIT COLLEGE FOR SMOKE

Boston, Nov. 1.—When it came to a question of quitting cigarets or quitting Wellesley College, Billie Burse, of Barre, Vt., and Jean Roth, of Stamford, Conn., freshmen elected to do the latter as a result, left Wellesley last night.

The trouble started when Mrs. Campbell, house mother at Maples, caught them smoking in their rooms. "I've a good mind to tell the dean," she told them. "You know the penalty, girls—she'd expel you in a minute. Next time I catch you—"

"Why wait?" asked Billie.

"We'll go now," said Jean.

"We're resigning," they said, "as a protest against the antiquated notion that ladies do not smoke."

EXPECT HALL CASE ARREST IN 3 DAYS

Prosecutor Mott Makes Definite Statement Despite Attack on Mrs. Gibson.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 1—"There will be an indictment in the Hall-Mills murder case within the next three days," declared Prosecutor Beekman of Somerset county Tuesday. He declined to amplify his statement, which came at the close of a day of melodrama, which gave little indication that the denouement was approaching in the investigation of the double slaying of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, a member of his choir, on Phillips farm September 14.

Mrs. Jane Gibson, ex-circus rider, pursuer of corn thieves and self-styled eye-witness to the murders, who has been absorbing public interest in the drama the last five days, Tuesday became irritated at the repeated efforts of reporters to interview her and shooed them off her farm by the simple expedient of firing a charge of birdshot over their heads. Thereafter interviews were conducted by telephone, whenever Mrs. Gibson could be induced to answer the bell.

"Husband" Under Dispute.

Mrs. Gibson insisted that William Easton, New Brunswick mechanic who has been appearing at her farm, where she lives with her son, Willie, was not her husband, but "only a relative."

Detective Totten, who had been checking up her story of the shooting, in which she claimed to have identified the slayer and his companion, said Tuesday afternoon, however, that Easton was her husband and that the couple were in Trenton, N. J., running a furniture business until Mrs. Gibson pulled up stakes and turned farmer. Since then Totten said Easton has occasionally appeared at the farm.

Say Gun Is Found.

Detectives said yesterday afternoon they were working on a theory that Dr. Hall had been killed with his own pistol. It was reported, but not confirmed, that the weapon had been found.

Detectives also said they were progressing in their search for the auto in which the slayer or slayers were believed to have driven to the scene of the murder.

Investigators are seeking a couple believed to have been on the Phillips farm the night the rector and choir singer were slain.

Detectives said the description given of the slayer by Mrs. Gibson would fit at least three local persons.

FIRE CREMATES THREE

Woman And Two Children Lose Lives At Cumberland.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 1.—The only trace of the bodies of three persons cremated in the fire which destroyed the old home of Alfred Ridgeley, Orchard Isle, on Knobley Mountain, in West Virginia, two miles east of Cumberland, early Monday morning, was a charred torso, thought to have been that of Mrs. Ridgeley. Jesse Ridgeley, aged 12, son of Ridgeley by his first marriage, and Elmer, aged 3, a son of the second marriage, also lost their lives and there is no trace of either body. The building was three stories, of log and stone, and the bodies dropped into the deep basement, which burned as a furnace for some hours. Other members of the family were painfully burned in escaping.

The origin of the fire cannot be explained. It was discovered by Jesse Ridgeley, the older son, who aroused his parents. Mrs. Ridgeley said to her husband: "Go, save the girls; I'm all right; I'll find my way out."

Ridgeley, after rescuing his mother-in-law, Mrs. Passler, whom he carried from the building, endeavored to assist his daughters, Anna May, 18, Gladys, 16, and Rose, 14, to escape down a ladder from the third floor. The ladders was too short and all were obliged to jump and were painfully burned, while Rose sustained a serious injury to her back.

Ridgeley, finding his wife and sons had not gotten out, made a frantic effort to reach them with a ladder through a second-story window, but when he broke the panes the flames swept out, burning his face and hands. Ridgeley's father, Alfred, past middle age, former member of the Mineral County Court, also escaped by jumping. He, too, was burned. Nothing was saved and members of the family were taken in their night clothes to the home of Elmer Carlson, some distance from the scene. Five hundred dollars in cash was consumed.

DROP R. R. CONTROL

Chinese Railway Passed Over To Chinese Government.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Control of the Chinese Eastern Railway reverts to the road's Board of Directors, with the Chinese Government held responsible for adequate protection of the property, under a decision of the American, British, French, Italian and Japanese Governments to terminate the supervisory activities of their representatives on the Inter-Allied Committee at Vladivostok and technical board at Harbin.

Action of the Powers in relinquishing control, which follows withdrawal of Allied troops from Siberia, was announced by the State Department in making public a note to Minister Schurman for delivery to the Chinese Foreign Office at Pekin, giving notification of this government's decision, in company with the other four Powers.

The decision to terminate the activities of the two commissions, it was indicated officially, followed failure of the Chinese Government to act on suggestions made to it during consideration of the Chinese Eastern Railway question at the Washington Conference.

The Washington Government, in its note, reaffirms "its concern in the preservation of the railway with a view to its ultimate return to those in interest without impairing any existing rights," and also its interest in the efficient operation of the property.

GIVES UP RICHES

Cadbury Riches Returned To Chocolate Maker's Workers.

London, Nov. 1.—Glowing memorials to the life and work of George Cadbury, the famous Quaker philanthropist and chocolate manufacturer, who died last week, are published in London newspapers, but little space is devoted to the unusual action of his daughter, formerly Beatrice Cadbury. She is now the wife of a Hollander named Boeke.

In a letter to the management of the chocolate works at Bourneville, Mrs. Boeke gives away outright all her holdings and her husband's in the company, amounting to 9,000 preferred and 27,000 common shares. The whole amount is presented to a trust company composed of men's and women's councils of the plant, to promote home and foreign activities.

Mrs. Boeke says the World War, with its appalling consequences, led her to believe private holding of great capital lies at the root of nearly all social and economic trouble.

"We therefore feel it our duty," she says, "to surrender the privilege we have so long enjoyed, hoping if such action is generally adopted peace and happiness could return to suffering humanity."

She recommends the capital be used for constructive experiences in production, distribution, education and the improvement of living conditions.

PEACH LEAF CURL SPRAYING

Fall spaying of peach trees with lime sulphur wash diluting the commercial brands one part to eight parts of water is the best control for the peach leaf curl according to experts of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. There is more time to do the work and the ground is firmer permitting larger quantities of spray material to be carried into the orchard. Early autumn sprays are more effective than those applied in the spring, because a warm spell may start the leaf buds sufficiently to admit the tiny disease spores, which once established cannot be reached by spray.

AUTO RUNS OFF OF FERRY

Man And Wife Up To Necks In Water.

New York, Nov. 1.—Friends of Major P. V. Kane, instructor of modern languages at West Point, Monday told the story of a few minutes Major Kane and his wife spent near death last Saturday when they were trapped in a limousine which tumbled from a Hudson River ferryboat and was partly submerged.

Major and Mrs. Kane were returning by motor from Yale-Army football game. Crossing the Hudson at West Point, their car was parked as the foremost of those on the ferryboat Highland. The ferry, in arriving at the slip bumped a piling abruptly and the automobile was started by the jar.

Before Major Kane could apply the brakes the machine went over the side. Major Kane and his wife were imprisoned. One mudguard, caught on a piling, was all that kept the car from entire submersion. With only their heads and shoulders above water, the soldier and his wife tried vainly to open the doors.

Captain Church, of the Highland, had immediately thrown the ferry engines into reverse to prevent the boat from crushing the limousine. His men trussed the car hurriedly, to prevent its sinking. Then they chopped a hole through the roof of the limousine, through which Major and Mrs. Kane were hauled.

Both were taken to the Academy Hospital, suffering from immersion and shock. Major Kane returned to his duties Monday.

WAS DUTIFUL GRANDSON

Calais, Me., Nov. 1.—Clifford Eye, the 18-year-old boy who led his own grandmother to the altar with the intention of making her his wife, was a dutiful lad at that.

Before he made any effort to marry grandma, he went to grandpa and asked him if it would be all right. And, when grandpa consented, Clifford could not see anything against it.

In other words, his grandmother, Mrs. Rebecca Eye, 70 years old, who went into New Brunswick with Clifford to get united in a marriage illegal even if she were single, has a husband living. This husband is Ellisworth Bridgham Garnett, to whom she was married more than twenty years ago.

Garnett has been confined to his bed since the first year after his marriage, when he had paralytic shock. For twenty years he has occupied an upper room in the house here, where Clifford came to live at the age of six.

Garnett gave his full approval to the match between his wife and the youth, they say, for when they first discussed marriage, Clifford felt that they ought to let grandpa in on it. So the two went upstairs to see him.

"Now, Rebecca, you know what's right. If you say so, why it's so."

This according to Mrs. Eye—or Mrs. Garnett, rather—was his reply. He then continued, she said, by congratulating the two sweethearts and predicting that Clifford would make an excellent husband.

nally was the occasion to honor the departed. And in the olden times it was the custom to visit graves of the departed and place thereon some tribute in remembrance.

From that the superstition arose that the dead came out to receive these gifts and, being out, strolled around a bit. Once an old-time jokester dressed up in grave clothes and impersonated a ghost with harrowing effect and from that the custom grew. Masqueraders today are all supposed to represent these wandering spooks and have a good time about it.

HARD CIDER A MENACE

Communicated

While this has proven a year of plenty in most parts of the State, yet these blessings that have come to many homes in Adams county may, in the end, prove a curse to them. We speak of the abundant apple crop.

Many bushels will go to waste when others gathered them and made barrels of cider which have been stored away in coal cellars. And by the time the season ends there will be thousands of barrels of cider in the cellars of American homes.

We took the ground before the passage of the Volstead act, that there was nothing wrong about the making of cider, or even using it,—when fresh or making vinegar of it. But this is not the purpose of many who are barrelling up cider. The apple juice is kept until it reaches the condition known, as the boys call it, "Hard Cider," a condition that renders it more dangerous as a drink than liquor.

This hard cider has and will make drunkards of thousands of thousands of boys, and to some extent has ruined many boys who are members of churches. Now what are these good old church people to do, who are alarmed about their girls and boys? Must they all run to the churches and bring the matter before these bodies? Or must they resort to moral suasion?

Either may be the means of removing the hard cider, but we believe the better way would be to have a preacher in our churches who knows how to knock the head out of hard cider barrels with a gospel hammer. In a community where there are a few earnest and fearless preachers who are willing to preach the whole gospel, church members as a rule do not keep hard cider in their cellars for drinking purposes.

Hard cider is understood to be one of the most dangerous drinks in the country. If the habit of drinking hard cider is persisted in, it will not only produce a taste for strong drink, but it will make people badly drunk. To talk about men being intoxicated on hard cider, means the worst kind of drunkenness, which has been fully demonstrated in different parts of the country lately.

Jesus at one time said to his disciples, "Howbeit, this kind of devils goeth not out but by prayer and fasting." It takes more than the Volstead law to remove the hard cider from a community. It takes the most persistent efforts of our preachers and the churches. We do not refer to fresh cider, or that which may be canned or preserved in its unfermented state, as we can and preserve grapejuice. But we refer to what we hear the boys call "hard cider," a beverage which is known to be intoxicating, is known to make men and boys drunk, and helps to create an appetite for strong drink. To make this country one of temperance, we should cut out hard cider.

TREE CARRIED OFF

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 1—The crabapple tree in the shade of which on the morning of September 14, last, the bodies of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist, and Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills, a singer in the church choir, were found murdered is gone.

Leaves, sprigs and limbs, it has been carried away, piece by piece, by the thousands of curio seekers from all parts of the country who have visited the Phillips farm since the double murder.

DAUGHERTY BREW

ZANE GREY

Author of Riders of the Purple Sage, Wildfire, Etc.

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

COPYRIGHT BY HARPER AND BROTHERS.

This young man was Dick Gale, but not the listless traveler, nor the lounging wanderer who, two months before, had by chance dropped into Casita. The desert had claimed Gale, and had drawn him into its crucible. The desert had multiplied weeks into years. Heat, thirst, hunger, loneliness, toil, fear, ferocity, pain—he knew them all. He had felt them all—the white sun, with its glazed, coalescing, lurid fire; the caked split lips and rasping, dry-puffed tongue; the sickening ache in the pit of his stomache; the insupportable silence, the empty space, the utter desolation, the contempt of life; the watch and wait, the dread of ambush, the swift flight; the fierce pursuit of men wild as Bedouins and as fleet, the willingness to deal sudden death, the pain of poison thorn, the stinging tear of lead through flesh; and that strange paradox of the burning desert, the cold at night, the piercing icy wind, the dew that penetrated to the marrow, the numbing desert cold of the dawn.

Ladd's prophecy of trouble on the border had been mild compared to what had become the actuality. With rebel occupancy of the garrison at Casita, outlaws, bandits, raiders in rioting bands had spread westward. Many a dark-skinned raider bestrode one of Belding's fast horses; and, indeed, all except his selected white thoroughbreds had been stolen. So the job of the rangers had become more than a patrolling of the boundary line to keep Japanese and Chinese from being smuggled into the United States.

On this December afternoon the three rangers, as often, were separated. Lash was far to the westward of Sonoyta, somewhere along Camino del Diablo, that terrible Devil's road, where many desert wayfarers had perished. Ladd had long been overdue in a prearranged meeting with Gale. The fact that Ladd had not shown up miles west of the Papago well was significant.

Gale dismounted to lead his horse, to go forward more slowly. He had ridden sixty miles since morning, and he was tired, and a not entirely healed wound in his hip made one leg drag a little. A mile up the arroyo, near its head, lay the Papago well. The need of water for his horse entailed a risk that otherwise he could have avoided. The well was on Mexican soil. Gale distinguished a faint light flickering through the thin, sharp foliage. Campers were at the well, and, whoever they were, no doubt they had prevented Ladd from meeting Gale. Ladd had gone back to the next waterhole, or maybe he was hiding in an arroyo to the eastward, awaiting developments.

Gale turned his horse, not without urge of iron arm and persuasive speech, for the desert steed scented water, and plodded back to the edge of the arroyo, where in a secluded circle of mesquite he halted. The horse snorted his relief at the removal of the heavy, burdened saddle and accoutrements. Gale poured the contents of his larger canteen into his hat and held it to the horse's nose.

"Drink, Sol," he said.

It was but a drop for a thirsty horse. However, Blanco Sol rubbed a wet muzzle against Gale's hand in appreciation. Gale loved the horse, and was loved in return. They had saved each other's lives, and had spent long days and nights of desert solitude together.

The spot of secluded ground was covered with bunches of galleta grass upon which Sol began to graze. Gale made a long halter of his lariat to keep the horse from wandering in search of water. Next Gale kicked off the cumbersome chapparejos, with their flapping, tripping folds of leather over his feet, and drawing a long rifle from his saddle sheath, he slipped away into the shadows. In the soft sand his steps made no sound. The twinkling light vanished occasionally, like a Jack-o'-lantern, and when it did show it seemed still a long way off. Gale was not seeking trouble or inviting danger. Water was the thing that drove him. He must see who these campers were, and then decide how to give Blanco Sol a drink.

Stooping low, with bushy mesquites between him and the fire, Gale advanced. The coyotes were in full cry. Gale heard the tramping, stamping thumps of many hoofs. The sound worried him. Foot by foot he advanced, and finally began to crawl. The moon he approached the head of the arroyo, where the well was located, the thicker grew the desert vegetation. He secured a favorable position, and then rose to peep from behind his covert.

He saw a bright fire, not a cooking-fire, for that would have been low and red, but a crackling blaze of mesquite. Three men were in sight, all close to the burning sticks. They were Mexicans and of the coarse type of raiders, rebels, bandits that Gale had expected to see. A glint of steel caught his eye. Three short, shiny carbines leaned against a rock. A little to the left, within the circle of light, stood a square house made of adobe bricks. This house was a Papagon Indian habitation, and a month before had been occupied by a family that had been murdered or driven off by a roving band of outlaws. A rude corral showed dimly in the edge of firelight, and from a black mass within came the snort and stamp and whinny of horses.

Gale took in the scene in one quick glance, then sank down at the foot of the mesquite. He had naturally expected to see more men. But the situation was by no means new. This was one, or part of one, of the raider bands harrying the border. They were stealing horses, or driving a herd already stolen. Gale revolved questions in mind. Had this trio of outlaws run across Ladd? It was not likely, for in that event they might not have been so comfortable and carefree in camp. Were they waiting for more members of their gang? That was very probable. With Gale, however, the most important consideration was how to get his horse to water. Sol must have a drink if it cost a fight. There was stern reason for Gale to hurry eastward along the trail. He thought it best to go back to where he had left his horse and not make any decisive move until daylight.

With the same noiseless care he had exercised in the advance, Gale retreated until it was safe for him to rise and walk on down the arroyo. He found Blanco Sol contentedly grazing. Gale carried his saddle, blankets and bags into the lee of a little greasewood-covered mound, from around which the wind had cut the soil; and here, in a wash, he risked building a fire. By this time the wind was piercingly cold. Gale's hands were numb, and he moved them to and fro in the little blaze. Then he made coffee in a cup, cooked some slices of bacon on the end of a stick, and took a couple of hard biscuits from a saddlebag. After that he removed the halter from Blanco Sol, intending to leave him free to graze for a while.

Gale Dismounted to Lead His Horse, to Go Forward More Slowly.

CAUGHT AFTER 5 YEARS

Alleged Slayer Of Policeman Located At Uniontown.

Norristown, Pa., Nov. 1.—William Heald, Conshohocken policeman, this afternoon in the District Attorney's office indentified photographs of Mike Ralph, alias Nolan, alias "Black Mike," who was shot to death Eugene J. (Chick) Lucas, Conshohocken policeman, on the evening of August 13, 1917, while the latter was in the act of serving a warrant for desertion and non-support.

The photographs had been sent to District Attorney Renninger by the police authorities of Uniontown, Pa., with the information that the orginal of the photographs had been identified by Lee H. Campbell, formerly of Conshohocken, as the wanted Conshohocken murderer. The man was living under the name of Joe Ross with a woman and one child. He denied ever being in Conshohocken, saying he is a native of Trinidad, Col., and was never farther east than Uniontown.

The description alleged that the man in custody has gold teeth in front, top and bottom; that he is about 35, and that he is 5 feet 5 inches in height, all of which tallies with the man wanted for murder here.

The District Attorney will send Heald and another policeman to Uniontown to bring the man here for trial. The murder was committed when Lucas, working as an extra policeman, went to Mike's room. Mike was in bed and jumped out with a revolver and fatally shot Lucas, who died within half an hour. Clifford Campbell, who was with Lucas, ducked in a corner and wasn't shot. Mike flew and nothing was heard of him until this message arrived.

HOBOES OUST RICH MAN

How, Leader And Benefactor, Barred From Convention.

Columbus, O., Nov. 1—There has been a parting of the ways and instead of one national hobo organization, there now are two—aristocratic and plebian.

Naturally the aristocrats represent the money group which rides on Pullman cushions to annual conventions, while the plebs ride the rods.

The parting came Saturday when the annual convention of the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, assembled here, refused to recognize the credentials of Dr. J. Eads How, of St. Louis, "millionaire hobo." How was declared not the real thing because of his wealth.

But How did not leave the convention alone. With him is said to have gone the convention's purse besides a majority of the delegates, including those from Chicago, Washington, Baltimore, Denver, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, St. Louis, Buffalo and Muncie. Cleveland and New York delegates, who went with How Saturday, returned to the regular convention.

James Eads How has been ousted from the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, which he founded, twice before, and each time he has come back.

He is the son of the late General Manager of the Wabash Railroad and a grandson of James B. Eads, who built the first bridge over the Mississippi. He is a graduate of Harvard, and has studied at Oxford.

He has spent all his time helping hoboes and the unemployed. He organized the Hobo Union and several hobo "colleges."

BACK AT OLD JOB

Secretary Of Labor Does Trick In Mill.

Seattle, Nov. 1.—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, who started in as a boy in the steel mills of Pennsylvania, graduating as a puddler and later as a rolling mill man, donned overalls again Monday, handled a pair of tongs and took his place as a heater at the rolls in the plant of the Youngstown Rolling Mills here.

Secretary Davis was visiting the plant as the guest of Superintendent James R. English, with whom he worked as a boy.

"Jim, I was wondering if you could do a trick in a steel plant now,"

"Jim, of course, I can," replied the Secretary, and he "did the trick." The little knot of workers around the rolls cheered.

"Do you know, I would rather work in a rolling mill than do anything else in the world?" the Secretary of Labor said as he left the mill.

SOUTH LAUDS LINCOLN

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 1.—Abraham Lincoln was endorsed as "one of the greatest and noblest Americans who ever lived" in resolution proposed Monday at the annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans of Missouri. The veterans convened here for a two day session.

"We want the world to know," said A. A. Pearson, brigadier general of the Missouri organization, "the majority of the Confederate veterans believe Lincoln was one of the greatest and noblest Americans that ever lived. We think the recent criticism of Lincoln is unfounded and foolish."

General Pearson said that he would present resolutions Tuesday disapproving those adopted June 1 by the National convention of Confederate Veterans at Richmond, Va., charging Lincoln with responsibility for the Civil War. General Pearson's resolutions declared "We do not believe any one was responsible for the war between the North and the South."

LIQUIDATE LOAN SOCIETY

Harrisburg, Nov. 1.—The State Banking Commission yesterday appointed Charles E. Gebhard, of Lebanon, as special deputy to wind up affairs of the Lebanon Valley Building and Loan Association, formerly of Lebanon, but with headquarters now in Chester. in Chester.

Gebhard is a former bank examiner and a veteran of the war. It was in connection with the issue of $60,000 of alleged illegal stock in the Lebanon Valley Building and Loan Association that John E. Hartman, former treasurer of Lebanon county, was arrested recently.

DEER SENSE DANGER

Weatherly, Pa., Nov. 1.—Hunters believe that the herd of deer that have been regular visitors on farms near the outskirts of town are sensing the approach of the season when they may be legally killed. The six does and a buck that grazed almost daily within half a mile of the borough have vanished and are thought to have taken up their rendezvous in thick woods, where they can evade gunners. Sportsmen say that near the beginning of every season deer that have come close to civilization during the summer make for the fastnesses of the forest.

HIGH AND PREP ON EDGE FOR BIG GAME

Annual Struggle is Expected to be Hard-Fought Affair.

Gettysburg will hear the annual battle cry Friday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock when High School and Academy lineup against each other on the Nixon Field. This will be the biggest game of the year for both teams and each is anxious to win. Last year the Academy came close to defeating High School. This year Academy has a heavier team and they feel sure of defeating the High School eleven.

The Academy backfield is fifteen and a half pounds heavier than the High School team, while the High School team line is but a fraction of a pound heavier than the Prep line. The Prep team averages seven and a half pounds heavier than the Maroon and White eleven.

Although the High School lads are outweighed they have the faster back field of the two. Due to the tense feeling between the two schools a good game is expected.

Louis Sheffer, a graduate of Gettysburg College, will referee the game, Haehnlen will be umpire and Althouse will be headlinesman. Sheffer refereed the game last year between High and Prep.

How the two teams will lineup with respect to age, weight and height.

IRISH CASTLES NOW CHEAP

Many in Land Are Going Begging For Purchaser.

Dublin, Nov. 1.—Does any Irish-American want a castle or a mansion in Ireland? If so, he can procure one right now at a very moderate charge; in fact they are going begging.

Here is a chance of a lifetime for the son of some former evicted farmer who was thrown on the roadside by some aristocratic landlord to return and purchase the home of the lord of the manor. Castles and mansions are on the market and can be purchased for the price of an ordinary suburban residence, but nobody wants them.

If you purchase a castle it is not certain that you will be allowed to live there. Nothing is your own nowadays in Ireland, because at any moment your most valuable possessions may be commandeered by roving gangs of men to help them in their fight for the Republic.

Mansions centuries old have in many parts of the country been razed to the ground. In them were priceless treasures, but no one seems to mind. The Duke of Devonshire's castle at Listowel, which is said to be more beautiful than King George's castle at Windsor, recently was the scene of a desperate fight between the Republicans and Free Staters and was saved from the flames only by the greatest luck.

Lismore castle, which is on the banks of the Blackwater (the Irish Rhine), is surrounded by a huge wall more than a mile in length. Its furniture and pictures alone are worth, it is said, more than a million dollars. The Duke, who was formerly Governor-General of Canada, owns huge estates in Ireland, besides being ground landlord of almost half of Cork city. He used to draw immense rent tolls from his estates.

MINISTERS ON JURY

Towanda, Nov. 1.—The second chapter in the murder case of August 15, when Norman Carmel, Lehigh Valley employe, was stabbed at Sayre street, will be opened here November 6, when Edward Sams, of Waverly, will be tried for murder. Tony Spardute, who it was shown did the actual slaying, was convicted of the same charge at September term and is now awaiting sentence.

The jurors to be summoned for the special term of court for Sams' trial has just been published. During the Spardute term great difficulty was experienced in selecting the permanent panel, more than a hundred being examined before twelve were accepted. The present list reveals the unusual fact that the first name drawn for each week was that of a minister. The Rev. H. I. Andrews, of Towanda, is called for the first week and the Rev. Frank W. Allen, also of Towanda, for the second week. A third minister, the Rev. E. M. Beysher, of Sayre, is also listed among the first week veniremen.

Another peculiar phase of the drawing for this term is that a minister's wife, Sarah Snitcher, of Wyalusing, is among those drawn. Her husband, the Rev. H. C. Snitcher, was one of the twelve who sat on the Spardute trial.

Breeding For Spring Litter

Pig losses at farrowing time are a keen disappointment to the man who sets high hopes on the income that is to come from his hog sales. These losses, that were so common last spring, can be avoided to a certain extent by searching for the cause of pig mortality and adopting the right method of management. The proper time to begin is near at hand,—the fall breeding season.

It must first be decided at what time the pigs are wanted next spring. For early March litters, the sow should be bred about the middle of November. The length of the gestation period is usually considered 112 days. Knowing this, the breeding dates can be determined, and the fall pigs can be weaned at the proper time. The average brood sow will come into heat three to six days after the weaning date.

A good many hogmen decrease the feed between the time of weaning and breeding. The practice is wrong. A stimulating feed and a little fresh green feed should be provided just before and during the breeding season. Also it is desirable that the sow have access to a supply of a mineral feed. After breeding, get the sows in good condition, and let them have all the exercise they want.

Spinach Raising

Not a few vegetable growers and home gardners in Adams county have difficulty in raising good fall spinach. Too frequently the plants stop growing and develop a yellow, sickly appearance, just before they should be maturing. This condition, called "the yellows," develops when spinach is grown under unfavorable soil or climatic conditions, according to W. B. Nisley, vegetable gardening extension expert at State College. Plant lice, too help to spread the disease by transmitting it from plant to plant.

The Virginia truck experiment station at Norfolk, after much selection, has developed a resistant strain of spinach that has been called "The Virginia Savoy Spinach." This strain was given a trial in several Pennsylvania counties this year with very good results, and it is expected that more seed will be available for the public next year.

Helps a Community to Improve Poultry

In any community where there is a strong interest in poultry raising, the extension service at the Pennsylvania State College, co-operating with the county farm bureau, is ever willing to lend a hand in the development of the work. One extension project that has been received with more than ordinary enthusiasm among poultrymen in a number of counties is that of the Poultry Demonstration Farm, on which the best practices are put in operation under the direction of poultry specialists and the county agent. How these farms are selected, and what system of management is observed, is explained in the following from Professor P. L. Sanford, of the State College extension force.

"In the first place, it should be understood that the farm selected for demonstration purposes, is not necessarily one that is in top-notch condition. More often, this is not the case, and it is on the poorer farms that the greatest improvement is noticeable, of course. The community that adopts the project makes its own selection of the farm to be used for the demonstration. With the farm chosen, a two-year program is outlined, in which same or all of the practices suggested by the poultry extension specialists are tried out.

"Three meetings are held at the farm each year, in fall, spring and summer. At these meetings the farmers and the extension poultrymen get together and discuss poultry management from every angle, each meeting, however, being limited to but one phase of the work. During the first year, the feeding of hens, rearing chicks, culling and summer management are taken up; the second year, then, concerns itself with the selection of breeders, poultry housing, and advanced problems of summer management. A round table discussion at the end of each meeting gives those who attend an opportunity to bring their own problems into consideration.

"Upon the owner of the demonstration farm, falls a great deal of the responsibility. He must be the local leader in poultry work. He must advertise the meetings, and see that the work has far-reaching effect. He keeps records of his flock, turns his accounts in to the Poultry Extension office, and upon receiving the summarized accounts from the college, he is responsible for their distribution among the poultrymen of the community.

"Since the success of the farm depends in a great measure upon the leader, he should be a broad-minded, energetic individual. The farm itself may be good or poor, but as long as there are 100 hens in the flock, it offers the necessary features. The poorer the farm, the more progress can be made; the better the farm, the more rapidly the best practices can be made evident to the community.

"It is quite impossible for the county agent to determine the probable amount of interest in such a project in any community. The community alone knows whether such a demonstration would be valuable, and whether or not it should be started."

Paul Hoffman, County Agent.

MADE PASTURE SHORT

The crop report just issued by the Bureau of Statistics, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, contains the following information relating to pasture in this State: "The unusually long drought affected all the late maturing crops adversely but none so severely as pasture. The condition of the pasture on October 1, for the the State at large, compared with normal was 71 per cent. The average condition of pasture in the northern tier counties was 85 per cent, in the southern tier counties 66 per cent, in the counties bordering the Delaware river 86 per cent and the counties bordering on Ohio 75 per cent. From this information it is apparent that the drought was most severe in the southern part of the State. The pasture was so short in many places that it was necessary for the farmers to put their cattle and other livestock on winter rations. This indicates that livestock will not go into winter quarters in as good condition as other recent years. The conditions of pasture one year ago was 93 per cent and two years ago 101 per cent."

BAD LUCK AND THE DEVIL PURSUED HIM

"I don't think any one has had more bad luck and sickness than I have. In 1905 I had two broken ribs, an arm and collar bone broken in a railroad accident. Then I had pneumonia. After recovering I crossed a pasture when a bull chased me, tossed me over the fence and broke my right leg. In 1910 I had typhoid fever; since then severe stomach and liver trouble, which no medicine or doctor touched until two years ago I got a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy which proved the first ray of light in thirteen years." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach liver and intestinal ailments, including appendictis. Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of all sorts. ACCURACY in ACCOUNTING

Within the memory of persons still living the word "accounting" brought up a picture of a man on a high stool writing with a quill pen and using sand instead of blotting paper.

But the telephone belongs to a newer era, and telephone accounting is as modern and as accurate as is humanly possible.

The men and women who do the accounting work are careful and take every precaution to avoid mistakes.

For they know that errors sometimes cause misunderstandings.

When mistakes do occur—and they are bound to occur once in a while—every effort is made to adjust them.

To adjust them courteously.

For in the accounting, as in every branch of the telephone organization, the Bell people work with the idea constantly before them that courtesy pays.

HURL WOMAN FROM ROOF

Police Find Slain Man's Body in Bag.

New York, Nov. 1.—Two new murders, one of a young woman, who was lured to the roof of an office building, the police believe, and then hurled to her death, and the other of a man whose body was found bullet-riddled and wrapped in a burlap bag and left in the gutter in front of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, are being investigated by the police.

Aaron Swatberg, a watchman, told the police that early Sunday morning he saw a dark object hurtle past his window, strike several clothes lines and land in a court yard which separatd the house in which he lived from a seven-story office building. When he went out he found the body of a young woman in the yard.

Detectives found evidence of a struggle on the roof.

The woman was identified by Frank Kempler as his wife. The police were told by Kempler's brother she had been melancholy recently and expressed the belief she might have committed suicide as it had been planned to take her to a hospital for a mental examination. A diamond ring valued at $250 which the brother-in-law said he knew she wore when she left home Saturday apparently to go shopping, was not on her finger.

Examination of the man's body found in the burlap bag disclosed a broken right shoulder and other signs of injury, and led police to the belief he was slain after a fight.

WIRELESS FOR LINEMEN

Hazleton, Pa., Nov. 1—"Trouble shooters"—linemen employed to hunt trouble on electric light and power lines—in this section this winter will have an ally in their work, in the form of the wireless telephone. A lighting company operating lines through eastern and northeastern Pennsylvania is planning to keep communication between its plants and field crews by the use of wireless stations. One will be located here and several of the trucks which the crews of linemen use are being equipped with broadcasting sets.

The plan is being worked out as a result of the difficulties experienced during severe ice and sleet storms in recent winters which not only crippled the electric lines, but frequently cut off telephone service. It also will be employed in normal times to permit the linemen to keep in touch with the plant here when they are in isolated sections from which difficulty may be experienced in reaching telephones.

A GETTYSBURG INTERVIEW
Miss Dillman Tells Her Experience.

The following brief account of an interview with a Gettysburg woman five years ago, and its sequel, will be read with keen interest by every citizen.

Miss Mary Dillman, 263 S. Washington St., Gettysburg, says: "My back was weak and hurt all the time. Backache bore down on me as if I had a great weight on my back. My kidneys were too free in action and when I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills I purchased some at the Peoples Drug Store. This remedy gave me fine relief and has never since failed to benefit me."

The above statement was given February 15, 1916 and on April 11, 1921, Miss Dillman said: "Nothing could ever make me go back on Doan's Kidney Pills. This very fine kidney medicine drove all symptoms of kidney trouble from me. Every once in awhile I take a few of Doan's to be sure my kidneys are still in good shape."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Miss Dillman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

REORGANIZATION MEN MEET

Analyzing State Finances For Past Ten Years.

Members of the State reorganization commission have met at Harrisburg to make an analysis of state finances for the last ten years with regard to costs and revenue. Commissioners are expected to meet tonight to talk over their legislative program again, and redrafts of the tax commission are expected to be ready soon.

Experts from the Citizens' Committee named by Chairman Clyde L. King, are examining into methods of accounting and other lines of state activity.

Due to the fact that many of the state officials will go to their homes Friday to observe political movements, the State Capitol will be closed Friday, and remain so until after election day. This has been done for years, the custom being said to have originated during the Pattison administration.

"There's an ATLANTIC pump Just Ahead"

Dependability is a grand old word, and in the case of Atlantic it fits three ways: On Quality, on Performance and on Service.

No matter where you buy Atlantic you can depend on getting gasoline unequaled for purity, refinement and uniformity. That's quality!

But Atlantic is more than good gasoline. It is RIGHT gasoline—correct for present-day motors and scientifically balanced to operate efficiently under every condition of speed, load and temperature a motor gasoline encounters. That's performance!

And once you adopt Atlantic as your motor's steady diet, you can depend on always being able to get a supply when the tank runs low. The Atlantic distributing system is widespread and thorough. Anywhere you happen to be, in the great regions in which Atlantic is sold, you may be sure there's an Atlantic Pump on the road you are traveling. That's service!

Individuality and Charm Mark the New Coats from Wooltex

It would almost seem that when Wooltex designers created the new winter coats they had in mind practically every type of woman, practically every age, every individual taste.

The woman who wants a coat simple in lines yet elegant in fabric and tailoring will find several beautiful models to choose from; the young girl will discover coats labelled all over "youthful and becoming." Some coats lend themselves to every day, every occasion use while others are more distinctly "dress coats" or "business coats."

But every time the Wooltex label shows it self in a collar then the wearer can congratulate herself on having secured beautiful all-wool fabrics, expert tailoring and style that is at the same time smart and enduring.

All the New Models on Display Now

STYLE NOTES ABOUT THE NEW COATS

Wooltex coats show the prevailing popular straight-line silhouette. Some are unbelted, others belted with the belt or girdle well below the waist. The full kimona sleeves give a graceful drape to many coats. Sleeves are the distinctive feature of all coats, pouch sleeves, bell sleeves, wide sleeves gathered into narrow cuffs. For trimming, you can choose from a long list—fur, cording, tucks, braiding, embroidery, silk stitching. In mariano, ormadale, velverette, normaglow, rubadre.

TRY TO BE MEN'S MODEL

London, Nov. 1.—Aha! Man is getting woman—unruly, independent, modern woman—under his thumb!

The gay young lass who has flouted the manners of her dear old "grannie" is calling a halt to her onward march for freedom, and all because there are too few men to go around.

Just because there are too few men, women are striving to model themselves after the fashion men admire, and men don't admire "too independent" women—at least they don't admire them sufficiently to warrant a venture on the matrimonial seas with them.

Francis Gribble, British writer, is the Christopher Columbus of femininity who has tracked down these facts.

"Women tend to become (or at any rate, to appear) what they find men like them to be," Gribble says.

"Since women just at present are looking for husbands rather more eagerly than men are looking for wives the play of competition makes it fairly certain the model woman will develop on the lines which man prefers.

"And man, there is no denying, is disposed to revolt against some of the characteristics of Georgian womanhood.

"He may—he doubtless does—admire the woman who makes him look foolish on the tennis court, argues him down at the debating society and tries to edge him out of his position in the office.

"But he is showing an increasing disinclination to marry her, preferring women who are a shade more efficient in the domestic sphere and a little readier to lean on him for help in his.

"Accordingly there has been a revolution in the outlook of women and signs of a 'throw-back' to the earlier ideal of perfect womanhood."
